第 41 至 42 題為題組

Vigilantes must first find out the identity of a person who has committed a crime or done something uncivil. They then put related information on the Internet to publicly shame that person. Everything the accused has done is brought out into the open. The problem with Internet vigilantism is that it fails to respect a person's basic right to privacy. It can cause irreversible damage to a person's reputation. Online vigilantism also has a negative effect on the family of the person being shamed. In addition, people with the same name as the accused will get caught in the cross fire. Worst of all, the person being shamed seldom gets the opportunity to defend himself. Before we post things online, we need to consider if a person's crime needs to be punished in such a dramatic way. When it comes to Internet vigilantism, we must remember that many things are posted anonymously or with an unknown, fake name, and that they only give a one-sided account of the truth.

41. According to the passage, what does a shamed person rarely get the chance to do?
- (A) Make up for what he has done. (B) Discuss the situation with his family.
(C) Share his opinion about the matter. (D) Read the details that are posted online.
42. What does the passage say about Internet vigilantes?
- (A) They value people's privacy. (B) They often hide their real identity.
(C) They always attack respectable people. (D) They even target their own relatives.

第 43 至 45 題為題組

There is a clothes store in London, England, which is worth visiting if you are looking for something unusual. The shop, called Cyberdog, is located in a busy tourist area called Camden Market. Outside, the street is quiet and old-fashioned, but inside you will find yourself in something that resembles a space ship. Here in this technological paradise, you will find battery-powered shirts, pants and jackets that light up with moving patterns or even flash along to a disco beat.

But although these clothes might seem like something from a science fiction movie, there will soon be even more advanced "smart clothing" for sale in your local stores. For example, a German clothes maker has recently come up with the "mp3blue jacket" that combines an mp3 player and a mobile phone. There are cloth buttons on the sleeves and a microphone in the collar. A British manufacturer has also created a keyboard, made of cloth, which can be sewn onto your pants so you can type wherever you go.

If you decide to purchase clothes that flash, play music, or through which you can talk to your friends, remember one thing: always remove the batteries before you wash them!

43. Which of the following phrases has the closest meaning to the word "resemble"?
- (A) take off (B) light up (C) make up (D) look like
44. With a "mp3blue jacket," people can _____.
- (A) make phone calls to their friends (B) type what they want to say wherever they go
(C) download their favorite mp3 from the Net (D) get their jacket to flash along to a disco beat
45. The author suggests that in the near future "smart clothing" can be found _____.
- (A) in Germany and nowhere else (B) only in London, England
(C) in any place where people live (D) only in a sci-fi movie

第 46 至 47 題為題組

Established in 1999, GCE is made up of 120 organizations with members in almost 100 countries. Education is a basic human right, and GCE campaigns to realize this right. It works with governments to improve education in each country.

In 2000, world leaders made a commitment to provide quality education for everyone by 2015. GCE developed several campaigns to help achieve this goal.

GCE is working with national governments to provide more quality teachers. Globally, 1.7 million primary school teachers are needed to reach the 2015 educational goal.

Today, nearly 1 in 6 people around the world cannot read or write. Not being able to read impacts a person's job opportunities and increases poverty. GCE seeks to provide teaching materials in primary students' mother tongues.

Around the world, many girls face neglect and are often denied an education. GCE aims to give women the same opportunities as men.

Every spring, GCE leads the Global Action Week. During this week, GCE highlights people who have been denied educational opportunities. This year the Global Action Week focuses on providing an education to disabled people.

GCE believes that quality education can change lives.

第 48 至 50 題為題組

Racing go-karts, or karting, has become popular worldwide. In the past 50 years, an estimated 1.6 billion people worldwide have enjoyed some form of karting.

In the late 1950s, Art Ingels built the first go-kart in California. Taking some metal tubes from his day job, building race cars, Ingels joined them together and added wheels and a small engine. People got excited about the kart and began building their own. The first karting championship race was held in 1964. Now there are competitive races held all over the world. Last April, 18 countries sent their best young racers to Austria to compete in the Red Bull Kart Fight World Final.

Wannalbe race drivers don't need to compete on a racing circuit. Almost anyone can rent a kart for a short session at an indoor track in many cities across the U.S.

Indoor racing kart tracks are usually built in old factory or warehouse buildings. These businesses attract people who want to drive for fun. They host all kinds of groups, from business outings to kids' birthday celebrations and other private parties. Tracks have short straight sections and tight corners to make driving exciting. An electronic scoreboard posts everyone's lap times, creating lots of excitement.

Indoor racing really became popular with the invention of the electric kart around the year 2000. Up to that point, gasoline engines powered the karts. These created terrible fumes that even big fans could not completely get rid of. But powerful electric motors put an end to the fumes. Now more and more people are coming to the tracks to sit on a kart and zoom around. Such an experience really does satisfy a need for speed.

48. Where was Red Bull Kart Fight World Final held last year?

- (A) California. (B) Australia. (C) Austria. (D) India.

49. Which of the following year might be the time when the first go-kart was created?

- (A) 1951 (B) 1956 (C) 1964 (D) 2000

50. According to the passage, what is a kart?

- (A) a kind of racing sport (B) a racing circuit (C) a small motor vehicle (D) a racing track
