五、閱讀測驗（共5分，每題1分）

Color is everywhere. But do you know how colors influence our body and mind? It has been proven that the combination of a yellow background and black type is the best choice for print material. When we read material printed like this, it seems to make a stronger impression so that readers will remember longer what they read. Furthermore, Washington State University recently announced the discovery that patients can tolerate more pain, recover more quickly and use fewer drugs when they stay in a room filled with a lot of greenery. Businesses can also benefit a lot from doing research on color. Marketing researchers say it is important for a company to use colors carefully in its brand names and products. As shown by their research, blue sends out a message of stability and brown indicates reliability, while too much yellow may make people lose their patience. Some studies further suggest that blue and green enable people to eat more slowly, while orange and red make people eat faster and eat more. This perhaps explains why Ronald McDonald wears red-striped clothes, and KFC and Pizza Hut have both chosen red as the major color of their businesses.

56. () What is the main idea of the passage?
- (A) Color is everywhere.
- (B) Colors have the power to influence our mind and body.

- (A) Green and blue can make people eat more slowly.
- (B) Blue indicates stability.
- (C) Brown is likely to please customers.
- (D) Green is helpful to patients.
59. () Why do chain stores such as McDonald's, KFC and Pizza Hut use red as their major color?
- (A) Because red is widely used in most restaurants.
- (B) Because red helps people to eat more.
- (C) Because red is a bright color.
- (D) It is only a coincidence.
60. () What can be inferred from the study released by Washington State University?
- (A) Patients are advised not to take too much medicine.
