Many hotels around the world are jumping on the bandwagon of going "green;" that is, they're using an environmentally friendly way to run their business.

What makes a hotel "green"? To begin with, a "green" hotel carries out a "towel reuse program." It means fresh towels are provided to the guests only at their request. In other words, it is the guests that decide when to get their towels changed. The program is meant to reduce the water and energy required for washing towels on a daily basis.

Besides, special containers are available in every room, and they allow guests to put their recyclable trash there. The recycled items can be used again. For example, recycled plastic bottles can be made into a new container for guests to put flowers in.

Most importantly, the amount of energy used in the hotel is reduced through different energy-saving plans. For instance, escalators are turned off between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m., when most guests are sleeping in their rooms. In addition, light bulbs in guestrooms are replaced with energy-efficient lighting systems. This way, several thousand dollars can be saved on water and electricity bills each year.

Oregon is the home to fishing towns where crab fishermen live and work. As the treacherous sea conditions have caused countless shipwrecks, Oregon is known as the “Graveyard” of Pacific. Among the fishermen we met on the live show, Deadliest Catch, are Brother Christ and Mickey Retherfords. They work diligently on two of the largest boats in Oregon to keep their business running. Another owner of a smaller boat, Kenny, has to struggle to compete with the Retherfords.

Hundreds of boats set off together at the beginning of crab season. Their goal is to catch as many crab as possible before the other fishermen beat them to it. To win in the fierce competition, time is essential to the fishermen. One of the dangers that the crab fishermen face is to cross the bar that is formed by the accumulation of sand. The bar separates the harbor from the fishing ground, forming huge waves that can ruin any boat easily.

The Retherfords brother crossed the bar successfully on a stormy day, but they chose to go back to the harbor for the safety of their crew and boat. However, Kenny couldn't make it that day, so he stayed at home with his little daughter, leaving Gary, his father, to brave the storm. Knowing that his father was disappointed in him, Kenny set off to the stormy fishing ground immediately.

44. Why would Oregon be viewed as the “Graveyard” of Pacific?

- (D) They made their way through the bar on a stormy day.

46. What can we infer from the passage?

- (A) Crab fishermen face many difficulties on their job.
- (B) Fishermen can take their time and relax on the sea.
- (C) Gary was glad that his son and granddaughter were safe at home.
- (D) Oregon is not a suitable place for people to live and work.

第 47 至 50 題為題組

Pancakes are a breakfast classic that you've probably made dozens of times. But let's face it: They rarely come out looking like the perfectly golden, fluffy(蓬鬆的) pancakes of your dreams. But we're here to change that—by pointing out everything you've been doing wrong and teaching you how to improve your skills. Here are six common mistakes in making pancakes.

Using a spoon

What you really want is a whisk(攪拌器). The larger the whisk is, the more air gets blended(混合) into the batter, making for the fluffiest pancakes you can imagine.

Overmixing

Little lumps(團、塊) you try to whisk out are perfectly fine. An overbeaten batter is actually worse than a lumpy one. That's because the more you mix, the more gluten(麩質、麵筋) develops in the batter—meaning you'll end up with tough, chewy pancakes instead of ones that are fluffy and tender. (You're making this mistake with your scrambled eggs, too.)

Not letting your batter rest

Don't just plop(撲通落下) a spoonful of batter on the pan the second you finish mixing the wet and dry ingredients. Instead, let the batter sit for at least 5 minutes and up to 30. The flour will absorb the liquid in the batter, making it thicker. Thicker batter is the secret of making your pancakes tasty.

Pouring oil straight into the pan

Stop pouring oil straight in the pan. Pour your oil onto a paper towel, and then rub it around the pan instead. Applying oil with paper towels allows the oil to hit every part of your batter evenly.

Cooking at the wrong temperature

When you cook your batter with high temperature, you'll burn your pancakes before the middle part even get heated. For crispy(酥脆的) on the outside, fluffy on the inside pancakes, set the burner to medium and let the pan heat up for about 3 minutes before plopping on your batter.

Flipping too soon or too often

Pancakes should be flipped just once. Flipping too often or too soon makes them deflate(洩氣), meaning you'll lose the fluffy texture. You should flip the pancakes not when they start to bubble but when the bubbles burst.

47. Which book will be the most likely source of this article?
(A) Wild Africa (B) Stacy's Kitchen Tips (C) The Crisis of Buying (D) Feast for your ear
48. Which of the following mistakes is the one that people tend to make when they're cooking scrambled eggs?
(A) Cooking at the wrong temperature
(B) Pouring oil straight into the pan
(C) Using a spoon instead of a whisk
(D) Overmixing all the ingredients
49. Which of the following is TRUE about the passage?
(A) Leaving your batter rest for ten minutes makes your pancakes taste better.
(B) Fire is not one of the things that you should consider while making pancakes.
(C) You should flip as many times as possible while cooking you pancakes.
(D) A lot of people tend to use pans as a great tool to mix the batter evenly.
50. Which of the following is NOT correct?
(A) Rubbing paper towel that is full of oil is better than pouring oil in the pan.
(B) In order not to lose the fluffy texture, flip your pancakes when its' bubbles burst.
(C) Once there's oil in the pan, plop a huge scoop of batter on it right away.
(D) Your batter can't be cooked evenly with the burner is at high temperature.
