"Basketball is America's pastime, and football its passion," someone once told me. This fully explains why "Monday Night Football" is revered as 36. It's also understandable why star players and their families are highly 37. Among them is Peyton Manning.

Child of Mississippi's Greatest All-Time Athlete, Peyton has more than proven that he is his father's son. Not yet a high school 38, he received offers from a great number of universities. He wanted to follow in his father's 39. This, however, did not include going to his father's school, the University of Mississippi. Instead, he accepted a football 40 from the University of Tennessee. As 41, he literally took the ball, ran with it and never looked back. Not surprisingly, he later ranked number one on the NFL draft list.

But what really sets Peyton apart 42 the others is his conscientiousness and generosity. Before every game, he studied football films and video 43 of past games to look for areas that needed improvement. While on breaks, he trained and invited his teammates to do the same. He has donated a large portion of his 44 to charities. He believes what he does off the field is much more important than what he does on the field. Peyton retired from the NFL in 2016. His legend will unquestionably live 45.

Ali's family lived in poverty and hardly made ends meet. Ali's father had problems finding a regular job, Ali's mother was in poor health, and Ali's sister, Zahra was still young. 46 One day, Ali fetched his sister's shoes from a shoe repairman. On his way home, he accidentally lost the shoes. Frustrated, he returned home and pleaded with his sister Zahra to keep it a secret from their parents. 47 Zahra's school hours were in the morning, while Ali's were in the afternoon. By chance, Zahra noticed her missing shoes on a schoolmate's feet. After school, they followed the girl home, only to discover that her family was even poorer than theirs. 48 A few weeks later, Ali learned of a long-distance race, with a new pair of shoes as the third prize! He decided to participate in the race and promised his sister to win her the new shoes. Much to his disappointment, he got the first place in a hard-fought dash. 49 Little did Ali and Zahra know what awaited them in front. 50

- (A) That night, it occurred to them that they could take turns wearing Ali's shoes to school.
- (B) Without the new shoes, he could not help but start to cry.
- (C) They were very short of money, let alone the rent unpaid for several months.
- (D) Out of pity and compassion, they had no alternative but to keep silent.
- (E) Their father was riding home with two pairs of new shoes on the back of his bicycle.

From: Vendy Awards Association

Re: Participating in the Vendy Awards

Dear Selena,

Thank you for your interest in participating in the Vendy Awards this year. Your food truck, Sky's Pies, has been added to the nomination list on the official website. However, this does not guarantee your food truck a spot at the Vendy Awards. In order to secure that spot, you will need to receive a large number of nominations. We encourage you to tell your customers to go online and vote for your truck. If you receive sufficient votes, we will notify you with more details about this year's event. Please be aware that the competition for spots is quite fierce as there are more than 10,000 vendors in New York City. Each year we have a large variety of vendors participating, which makes the competition both fun and delicious. We wish you the best of luck during the nomination period and hope to see your food truck at the Vendy Awards. If you have further questions, please direct them to pr.vendy.com.

All the best!

Carla Santos

Vendy Awards Association Director

(II) China has always captured my imagination because it is such a significant nation, both in terms of its size and its history. I saved up for a China vacation for years, thinking I would visit the Forbidden City in Beijing or perhaps the terra cotta soldiers in Xi'an. It was a great surprise to me when I eventually decided to visit Sichuan Province because of a magical range of mountains nearby.

The name of my destination was the Four Sisters Mountain, which is the main attraction of a remarkable national park. Though I adore the Chinese culture as a whole, I'm also in love with the outdoors and the mountains in particular. When I heard that this park showed China at its most beautiful, and saw pictures that proved the fact, my mind was made up.

Once I reached the park, I expended a few relaxing days discovering some of the park's greatest features. These included Lama Temple in the Changping Valley and rocks in the Shuangqiao Valley that had been shaped by a great artist – the wind. These initial days made the trip worth it, but the most memorable experience was yet to come.

With the assistance of a wonderful guide, several other travelers and I made the journey to the top of Dafeng. The Four Sisters Mountain is made up of four peaks, and Dafeng is its lowest peak but is not lacking in beauty. The climb took several days, but once I stood atop the mountain, it became clear why many call this place "the Alps of the Orient." There is so much of China to see, and because of this I may never return to the Four Sisters Mountain. Still, I will always be able to escape to the view from that mountaintop in my mind.

53. Why did the writer visit Four Sisters Mountain instead of the Forbidden City?

- (A) The writer was afraid of the crowds in the city. (B) The writer thought the Forbidden City was too large.
(C) The writer found it expensive to see Beijing. (D) The writer preferred to be in nature for vacation.

54. Why may the writer not return to the Four Sisters Mountain?

- (A) The writer was not impressed with the sights there. (B) The writer would rather travel to other parts of China.
(C) The writer didn't like the Chinese culture after all. (D) The writer didn't think it would be exciting on a second trip.

(III) Tai Tzu-ying was born on 20 June 1994 and is a badminton player from Taiwan. In 2011, she won the title of Taiwanese ranking competition when she was only 16 years and 6 months old, becoming the youngest No. 1 in Taiwanese badminton history. She became world No. 1 in women's singles in December 2016, and has ranked No. 1 for 29 continuous weeks since then. Tai started her 2017 season ranked No. 1, and won her first All England title in March, beating Ratchanok Intanon in the finals. In April, Tai won the Malaysia Open as well as the Singapore Open beating Carolina Marin in the finals two times in two weeks, Malaysia and Singapore being her fourth and fifth consecutive titles. Later in April, she won her first title against Akane Yamaguchi in the Badminton Asia Championships held in Wuhan, China, marking a consecutive title. It was also the first gold medal for Taiwan in this competition. Following her victory, Tai thanked her fans for their support and said she won't let the win go to her head.

(IV) Korean is a beautiful but complex language. Counting to 10 can be simple – depending on what you are trying to count. There are two completely different sets of numbers in Korean: one is the Sino-Korean numbers derived from Chinese and the other is the pure Korean numbers based on Korean words. The following table is about the comparison among Hindu-Arabic, English, Sino-Korean, and pure Korean numbers. The fifth column is about the variation with a counter, that is, 1, 2, 3, and 4 will be changed.

Hindu-Arabic Numbers	English Numbers	Sino-Korean Numbers	Pure Korean Numbers	With Counter
0	zero	영 / 공
1	one	일	하나	한
2	two	이	둘	두
3	three	삼	셋	세
4	four	사	넷	네
5	five	오	다섯
6	six	육	여섯
7	seven	칠	일곱
8	eight	팔	여덟
9	nine	구	아홉
10	ten	십	열

The following are the specific situations when you use two different number systems.

The Sino-Korean numbers are used in limited situations:

- When counting and dealing with money
- When measuring
- When doing math
- In phone-numbers
- When talking about and counting time in any way except the hour
- The names of each month
- Counting months

The pure Korean numbers are used when:

- You are counting things, people, and actions
- Talking about the hour in time

There are also two ways to say zero, but both are Chinese forms.

- Use 영 when referring to points that can be given or taken away, such as in a game score or quiz show; the temperature; and when using numbers in math.
- Use 공 when talking about phone numbers.
