56 is normal that teenagers get nervous 57 the first day of senior high school and I am no exception. As far as I can 58, I was 59 nervous and excited to sleep well. Actually, I tossed and turned all night before that day. Much 60 my annoyance, I had an upset stomach, and a huge red zit was found right on the tip of my nose, which destroyed not only my first day but 61 of my senior high days. However, when I was chatting about the incident with my schoolmates and said to them how 62 I was at that time. No one remembered it but for me. All of a sudden, I came to realize that most people only care about their own problems and had no time to think about 63. That is, my zit story is 64 a funny memory instead of a sensational news to 65.

Everyone knows washing hands stops the spread of disease. In the past, however, this idea was ignored. In 1846, when Ignaz Semmelweis began working in a hospital, childbirth was dangerous for women. After giving birth, many women developed a serious infection called childbed fever. Nobody knew what caused the fearful infection. In Semmelweis's hospital, the women who were helped by doctors during childbirth had a higher chance of developing this infection than the women who were helped by midwives. Semmelweis wondered why this was, so he decided to look into it. He found that the doctors often carried out autopsies before helping with childbirth. He suspected that infection was being spread from dead bodies through touch. Semmelweis then ordered the other hospital workers to wash their hands after autopsies. Thanks to his action, the rate of childbed fever soon dropped throughout the hospital.

71. According to the passage above, what did people not pay attention to in the past?
- (A) The dangers of childbirth. (B) The advice of doctors.
(C) The spread of bird flu. (D) Hand washing.
72. What did Semmelweis notice in his hospital?
- (A) Newborn babies commonly had a fever. (B) Women became very sick after giving birth.
(C) It took a long time for women to give birth. (D) Women had to help themselves during childbirth.
73. In Semmelweis' time, what did doctors often do before helping with childbirth?
- (A) Perform operations on sick patients. (B) Clean beds for women giving birth.
(C) Order nurses to wash their hands. (D) Touch dead bodies.
74. When did the rate of infection among women drop?
- (A) When doctors began washing their hands. (B) When doctors stopped performing autopsies.
(C) When childbirth was helped only by midwives. (D) When women began washing their hands before childbirth.

People who only have seen seals in animal theme parks might think of them as cute, playful creatures that love to balance beach balls on their noses. But they are much more interesting than that. Seals are in fact hunting machines that can race through the water at a high speed. They can dive down to a depth of 900 meters and hold their breath for up to two hours. These abilities allow them to easily catch their prey, mostly fish and crabs. Most of a seal's body weight is made up of fat, which keeps them warm in freezing waters, where they normally live. Therefore, they need to eat a lot of food, typically around five percent of their body weight per day. The largest type of seals can weigh up to 4,000 kilograms, and that means they can eat over 200 kilograms of food a day!

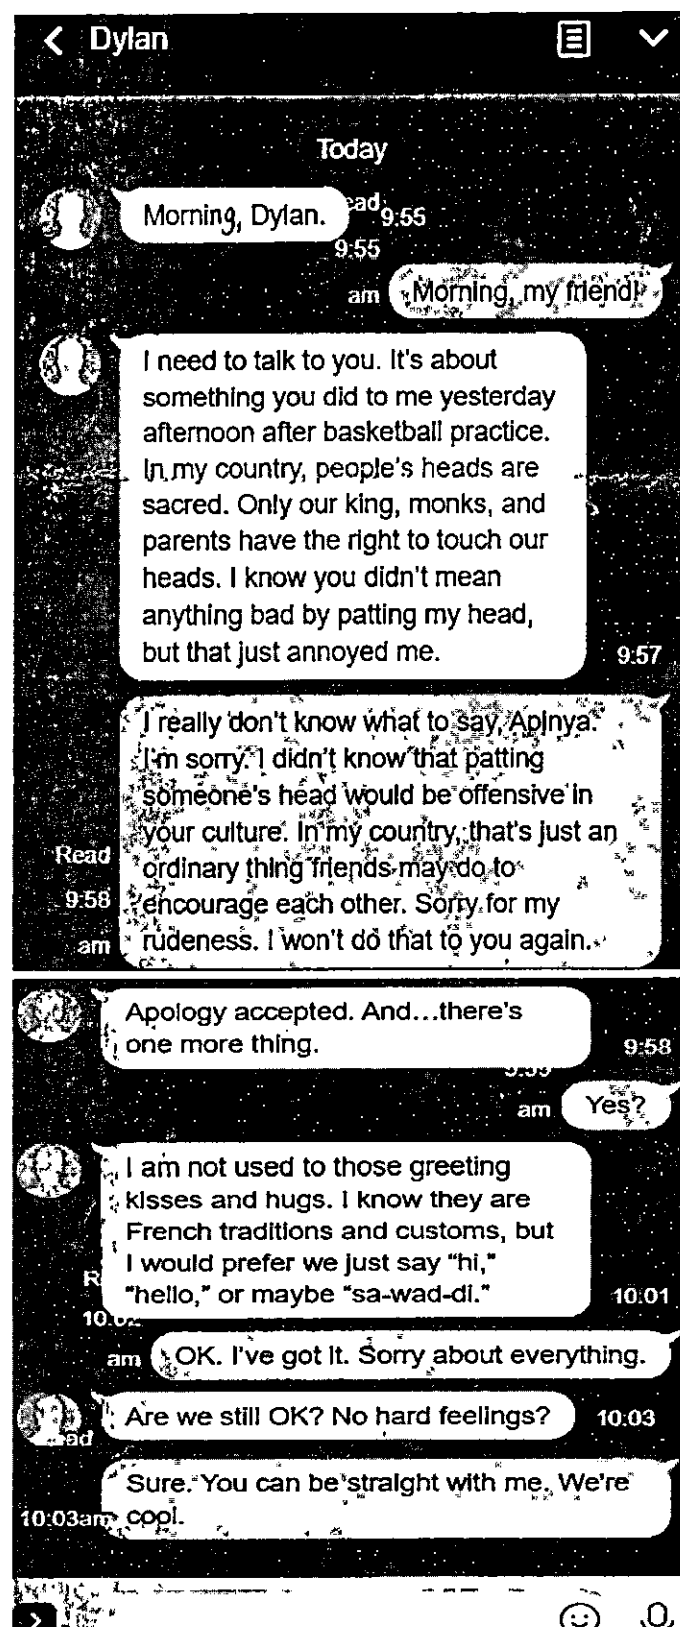

75. What does the first sentence describe?
- (A) Humans' false belief of seals.
(B) The way seals live in their natural environments.
(C) People's common impression of seals.
(D) The reason why seals are thought of as hunting machines.
76. Which ability allows seals to catch prey?
- (A) Their sharp eyesight.
(B) Their strong sense of direction.
(C) Their ability to float on water for a long time.
(D) Their ability to stop breathing for a long time.
77. What information about seals is NOT mentioned in the passage?
- (A) The food they eat.
(B) The place they live.
(C) Their natural enemies.
(D) Their special abilities.
78. Why do seals need to eat a lot of food every day?
- (A) They need energy to stay underwater.
(B) They need to stay warm in cold water.
(C) They need energy to hunt all the time.
(D) They need to stay cool in hot weather.
