第 61 至 62 題為題組

If you ask someone to tell you a fact about a chameleon, they will probably talk about its talent for changing color. People think chameleons change their colors to hide from predators. But chameleons already have skin that looks like the environments which they live in, so they have no need to change color to hide. Most of the time, chameleons change color to stand out from their environment. When a chameleon becomes bright white, yellow, or red, it is a display of power that helps them to defend their territory. By showing themselves so clearly, they let other nearby chameleons know to keep away. Other reasons may be to show their moods, or to control their body temperature. For example, darker skin would allow them to absorb more heat.

61. Why do chameleons change colors most of the time?

- (A) To look different from their surroundings. (B) To appear larger in size.
(C) To look like their environment. (D) To change their moods.

62. What will a chameleon do if it feels cold?

- (A) Turn a darker color. (B) Turn a lighter color.
(C) Stop moving to save energy. (D) Move around to produce body heat.

第 63 至 64 題為題組

It's easy to share material via the Internet. That ease, however, has also made it easier to commit copyright infringement. When someone creates a piece of work, they automatically have the right to do whatever they want with it—that's copyright. However, if you want to copy or use that work, you can only do so with the creator's permission. Copyright law is not well understood among most Internet users. As a result, most copyright crimes are committed by accident. But breaking copyright law can result in a big fine or jail time. If you want to use a piece of work but aren't sure if it's under copyright, look for the phrase "all rights reserved." If it's there, then it means you need the creator's permission to use their work.

63. Which best describes what "copyright" means?

- (A) A right to allow people to use another person's work for free.
(B) An individual's right over the work they create.
(C) A right to use another person's work without permission.
(D) The law that protects people who copy others' work by accident.

64. What must a person do, under copyright law, if they want to use a creator's work?

- (A) Get permission from the government.
(B) Wait until the creator has passed away.
(C) Use the work before informing the creator.
(D) Ask the creator if it's OK to use their work.

第 65 至 66 題為題組

Jason Mraz's path to success was more of a relaxed journey than a fight to the top. In high school, he took part in singing, drama, and cheerleading, which made him a target for bullies. He decided to leave his hometown to pursue a career in musical theater. However, when a friend gave him a guitar, Mraz's goals changed. He learned to play and started writing songs. Mraz jumped from town to town until he finally stayed in San Diego, where he released his first album, Waiting for My Rocket to Come. Mraz's songs have always had positive messages. "The Remedy (I Won't Worry)" was written to offer encouragement to a friend who was suffering from cancer. His biggest hit, "I'm Yours," is about self-empowerment and loving yourself and others.

65. What does the first sentence mean?

- (A) Mraz's path to fame was far from smooth.
(B) Mraz wasn't stressed about achieving fame quickly.
(C) Mraz's success has inspired many of his fans.
(D) Mraz remains humble after he is famous.

66. Why did Miraz write "The Remedy (I Won't Worry)"?

- (A) To explain how it feels to be ill.
- (B) To say that there is a cure for every disease.
- (C) To show that he wasn't worried about his friend.
- (D) To offer positive thoughts to a friend who was sick.
