No matter how skilled or experienced an interviewer you might be, most job interviews eventually turn into question-and-answer sessions. After all, the more you ask, _____ 37 _____ you learn about the candidate. Take a page from the hostage-negotiation playbook. Chris Voss, a longtime FBI hostage negotiator and author of the bestselling book Never Split the Difference says, "If there were such thing _____ 38 _____ a Jedi mind trick in negotiation, it would be this: the principle of mirroring."

Mirroring is simple. Just repeat back three or four key words from _____ 39 _____ the other person just said, preferably the last three or four words. _____ 40 _____, say you ask a candidate one of the most common behavioral interview questions: "Tell me about a time you had to raise an uncomfortable issue with your boss." The candidate describes raising an issue about a poorly-designed process, and ends with, "... but my boss wasn't very happy with me." Your mirror response, stated as a question, _____ 41 _____ your voice rising at the end to emphasize curiosity: "Wasn't very happy?"

Do that, and you _____ 42 _____ at least two things. One, you show you're actually listening. Two, you show you want to know more ... and the candidate will give you more. As Voss says, "People love to be mirrored. They love to be encouraged to go on." Mirroring sounds more conversational. Asking follow-up questions is important but can seem _____ 43 _____: "What did you do next?" "How did that turn out?" Each also sounds potentially judgmental. What the candidate did, how things turned out – the answers could be positive or negative. But mirroring takes "judgment" out of the equation. Mirroring says, "That's interesting. Tell me more."

Keep mirroring and you'll learn how the candidate _____ 44 _____ the call, built rapport, dealt with rejection, found the right strategy, etc. _____ 45 _____ repeating the last three or four words the candidate says, you'll turn what could have been a question-and-answer session into a/an _____ 46 _____ conversation. And get a better sense of their motivation, outlook and cultural fit.

Green Chemistry is the design of chemical products and processes that reduces or eliminates the use or production of hazardous substances. Green chemistry applies across the entire chemical product, including its design, manufacture, use, and disposal. Green chemistry is also known as sustainable chemistry. It prevents pollution at the molecular level. It uses new scientific solutions to solve real-world environmental problems. It reduces the negative impacts of chemical products and process on human health and the environment. Green Chemistry reduces pollution at its source, by minimizing or eliminating the hazards of the entire production process. It is unlike cleaning up pollution, which involves treating waste streams or cleaning up environmental spills. Green Chemistry keeps the hazardous materials out of the environment in the first place. Green Chemistry has 12 principles.

Here are the first three: 1. Prevent waste. Design chemical processes to prevent waste. Leave no waste to treat or clean up. 2. Design processes so that the final product contains the maximum amount of starting materials. Waste few or no atoms. 3. Design less hazardous chemical processes. They should use substances that have little or no ability to poison humans of the environment.

52. What would make a good title for this article?

- (A) Let's Do More Than Clean Up Pollution
- (C) Stop Wasting and Start Spending

- (B) Even If It's Green, It Might Not Be Clean
- (D) It's Hard to Find the Best Solution

53. What is the main idea behind Green Chemistry?

- (A) It is a kind of science that is in its early stages.
- (C) It creates products with easy-to-clean waste.

- (B) It takes into account other streams of science.
- (D) It stops pollution from ever happening.

54. According to this article, what is true?

- (A) Green Chemistry requires intelligent designs which can remove perilous materials.
- (B) Green Chemistry is a taste of what the scientific field will look like.
- (C) Green Chemistry doesn't allow for toxic chemical procedures.
- (D) Green Chemistry continues to develop without human involvement.

This adventure began back in March of 2019 when our daughter got engaged. She and the man she planned to marry live in Chicago. However, they had both grown up in different parts of Asia, so they planned a destination wedding in Phuket. A year later everything was arranged. Plane tickets had been purchased and we all had our hotels set. But then the coronavirus started affecting everything. Travel regulations and quarantines began, so some guests cancelled. But we decided to go ahead with our plans and took off for Thailand.

The pre-wedding activities included going to and exploring various islands by boat. We also canoed and swam in the ocean. Some also went to a place where elephants are protected. There we fed, washed and swam with them. And let's not forget the Phuket night markets –always an adventure. On the weekend, we all celebrated at the beach wedding and the dinner party that followed. But our adventure had only just begun!

The next morning, my husband and I flew to Sandakan, Borneo. Our destination was the Kinabatangan Wetlands lodge, an hour by boat and in the middle of one of Malaysia's most important wildlife refuges. As we cruised along the riverbank, we observed an orangutan and caught sight of proboscis monkeys swinging from trees.

After dinner – the night was very dark - we boated up the river where we saw mango trees lit up like Christmas trees from fireflies. The next morning around 40 pygmy elephants paraded by our boat. Boating back to the resort, we spied otters, baby crocodiles, monkeys and much, much more. It was an adventure never to be forgotten!

55. What did the author imply about their daughter's wedding?

- (A) They had more fun touring Thailand than they did at the wedding.
- (B) Despite their disapproval, the wedding still took place.
- (C) Even with the coronavirus, they managed to go through with their plans.
- (D) Nothing should ever stand in the way of true love.

56. What did the author and her husband do after the wedding?

- (A) They were stuck in Thailand due to the coronavirus.
- (B) They had to fly immediately back home due to the coronavirus.
- (C) They helped their daughter and son-in-law move home.
- (D) They went to another country and saw many wild animals.

57. Why does the author use the word, "Adventure" in the title?

- (A) There were so many exciting aspects, good and bad.
- (B) There were times when they didn't know if they would live or die.
- (C) There were activities planned that they didn't want to do.
- (D) There were times when they didn't know if the wedding would happen.

Have you seen the Disney movie Coco? The story is inspired by Mexico's Day of the Dead festival. In this story, twelve-year-old Miguel dreams of becoming a musician like his hero, Ernesto de la Cruz. Unfortunately, his family has given up music because long ago, Miguel's great-great-grandfather abandoned his wife and their daughter, Coco, to become a musician. Afterward, no one in the family played music.

Miguel lives with his grandmother, Coco, and the rest of the family. On the Day of the Dead, he discovers an image of his great-great-grandfather in a photograph of Coco with her mother. In the image, he is holding Ernesto's famous guitar! Thinking that Ernesto must be his great-great-grandfather, Miguel disobeys his family's wishes and signs up to perform music in a talent show. He steals Ernesto's guitar from Ernesto's grave so that he can play it in the show. But once he starts playing, he turns into a ghost and becomes invisible. Only his dead relatives, who have returned for a visit on the Day of the Dead, can see him. Miguel's dead relatives bring him back to the land of the dead. There, Miguel seeks the help of his great-great-grandfather to return to the land of the living.

In the end, Miguel returns home and makes peace with his family. From his adventures, he learns the importance of family, love, and support. Although he disagrees with its rules, he knows that his family loves him. Seeing the gentle treatment that his family gives Coco, Miguel also learns the importance of respect for the elderly.

58. According to the article, what is the movie Coco mainly about?

- (A) The mystery of an old guitar.
- (B) The origin of the Day of the Dead.
- (C) How to become a famous musician.
- (D) A boy's dream and his meeting with deceased relatives.

59. Why is music forbidden in Miguel's family?

- (A) His family regards music as noise.
- (B) Music is strongly linked to death.
- (C) Someone in the family left the family for music.
- (D) Music makes them recall their miserable homeland.

60. What does the word "invisible" in the second paragraph mean?

- (A) Dark.
- (B) Apparent.
- (C) Unclear.
- (D) Impossible to see.

61. According to the article, which of the following statements is NOT true?

- (A) Miguel's great-great-grandfather didn't become a musician.
- (B) Miguel stole Ernesto's guitar to attend a talent show.
- (C) Miguel successfully returns from the land of the dead.
- (D) Miguel looks up to Ernesto and wishes to be a musician like him.
